

Housing meeting

Officials hear North Reading complaints on proposed housing

by Arlene Surprenant
It's uncertain whether most of the heat in the crowded Knights of Columbus Hall in North Reading last Thursday came from a lack of fresh air or from the heated exchange taking place between the Wilmington Housing Authority (WHA), Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski, and approximately 75 residents of North Reading.

But one thing is certain: North Reading residents, many of them from the Martins Pond area, came to air their views of the low to moderate income homes proposed for the Lost Colony area and air them they did.

The original invitation to attend the public meeting was extended to WHA member Dan Gillis who, along with his board, agreed to be present to answer questions and provide information.

The primary complaint seemed to be that Wilmington officials had not informed North Reading officials and residents about their decision to locate some of the homes on the North Reading border. Many present were also suspicious of the board's motives.

"We got wind of it by word of mouth," said one angry resident, "and you never had the courtesy to contact our townspeople."

North Reading Selectman Nick O'Brien concurred. "We heard about this through the grapevine," he said, adding that there should have been a dialogue set up before plans were made and money spent.

To date, the Executive Office of Community Development (EOCD) has spent $58,000 for an architect and "quite a few thousand" for survey work, said WHA Executive Director Lillian Buckley. The state is also committed to $65,000 per unit for each of the eight single family scattered site homes to be located on several sites in Wilmington.

Many residents vocally opposed the location of three of those homes in the Lost Colony area as they felt they would aggravate existing problems along the North Reading line. Those problems include low water pressure, poor drainage, blasting in the area, wetlands, one access road, and traffic burdens.

Living in the area along Burroughs Road is "a nightmare," one resident said, as the road is under water in the spring. Another pointed out that septic systems eventually drain into Martins Pond and this creates numerous flooding problems.

Also, residents were concerned that North Reading was going to continue supplying such services as water and fire protection to homes along the border.

Buckley said that EOCD suggested the town administrators get together and work something out so these services wouldn't be a burden to North Reading. EOCD, she added, is "sensitive to your feelings."

Stapczynski told the audience that Wilmington has a "mutual aid agreement" with abutting towns and it reciprocates with services to some parts of North Reading.

"It seems to me that you're dumping one of your problems in North Reading," called out Doug Strong, one of the leaders of the opposition. He questioned why

Wilmington would want to locate more homes in such an "isolated area."

WHA Chairman Kevin McMillan explained that his board had spent a lot of time going over the lots, paring down the original list of available town owned property from 65 to 11 lots. Through the process of elimination, he said, these were the only lots considered buildable. The lots in the Lost Colony area, he added, have already been approved by EOCD though his board has yet to obtain a building permit to start construction there.

One resident was firm in his belief that "there shouldn't be a contention between our two boards" because the blame lay with the state. The state requires the low and moderate housing in order to get the elderly units, he said, and he suggested residents influence state legislators and the executive office to change the requirement.

Another resident strongly disagreed, saying the issue should end up in court as "this thing stinks."

"At what point do we stop asking questions and start solving problems?" asked one audience member.

Gillis pointed out that the way to solve any problem is to get together and, through a combined effort, work things out. He reaffirmed that his board "did everything we were supposed to do" in order to get this far in obtaining some much needed housing for Wilmington, and they didn't realize there would be this kind of a reaction.

Stapczynski told the audience "I can understand your position." He informed residents that Wilmington has undergone some "knock down, drag out fights" over housing in the past and their effort to get this far "didn't come easy."

Placing some of the single family homes in the area, he explained to an attentive audience, was "the best we could do."

Senior center

The Wilmington Senior Citizens' Drop-In Center at the old Buzzell School is nearly ready to open. On Saturday, members of the local carpenters' union donated some more time and closed in the last set of windows on the building. At right, carpenters Damon Black of Wakefield and Jack Nickerson of Brentwood Avenue work on the outside of the building while State Rep. Jim Miceli discusses the project with Ann MacInnes and Edie Cunningham, coordinator for the drop-in center.

Attic fire

Firefighters were summoned to the Wagstaff home on Pleasant Street, North Wilmington last Wednesday afternoon at 2:40 p.m. to fight an attic fire. The fire was contained in the attic and space over the breezeway, but the house also sustained smoke and water damage.

Concert goers

Marcia Sawyer (right) and her son Michael recently returned from the Live Aid concert at Wembley Stadium in London. They won the trip in a contest run by Boston radio station WZOU.

They saw the Live Aid Concert live in London

by Lauren Terrazzano
Among the crowd of 72,000 people who witnessed the phenomenal Live Aid Concert at London's Wembley Stadium were two very lucky Wilmington residents.

By being the fourth caller in Boston radio station WZOU's Live Aid Contest, Marcia Sawyer was entered into the final drawing in which she won the all expense paid trip for two to view the spectacular. Because her husband Alan was unable journey with her to London due to work obligations, Marcia brought her son Michael, 12, with her.

On July 11, the two winners boarded a Pan Am jet bound for Kennedy International Airport where they made connections to London's Heathrow Airport. The following day they arrived at their lavish accommodations at Kensington Palace Thistle Hotel for their seven day stay. They also received a four day pass for "The Tubes", (London's underground transportation system).

On July 13, Marcia and Michael prepared for the sixteen hour extravaganza at Wembley Stadium. "We arrived about an hour and a half before the concert," Sawyer reminisced. "It was over before we knew it." She added, "There was so much energy in that stadium - it was incredible. There were all ages - young children to elderly." When asked who her favorite performer was, she responded without a moment's hesitation "Paul McCartney."

When her son Michael was asked the same question, he replied "I don't know - there were so many that I liked."

With such a large mass of people, the question of safety sometimes arises. "The whole thing was very well organized. The crowd control was good. If someone caused any disturbances, the bobbys (English policemen) handcuffed them and escorted them out of the stadium," she added.

Although somewhat tired after the 13-hour concert, Marcia and Michael enjoyed it tremendously. They were disappointed, however, that the supposed Beatles reunion never took place. A few minutes after ten o'clock, the weary concert goers returned to their hotel. Despite the latter disappointment, the Sawyers were happy that world hunger was combatted through this tremendous concert. Sawyer concluded, "I only hope that as much of it (profits from concert) gets to the people. It was very exciting to think that this many people were rallying for one cause."

The remaining days of the Sawyers trip were spent seeing the sights. They toured Buckingham Palace, Madame Tussauds Wax Museum, and Big Ben. They also visited the old London dungeons, Scotland Yard, and Ten Downing Street. They returned to Wilmington July 18.

Services Thursday for School Committeeman John Brooks

John D. Brooks, one of the most active persons in Wilmington for the past 31 years, died at his home at 300 Salem St., on July 22. Seventy-five years old, a native of Cambridge, he was the son of the late Julia (Murphy) and the late Joseph Brooks. He lived in Somerville for many years prior to moving to Wilmington in 1954.

A graduate of Boston College High School, Boston College in 1932 and Harvard Law School, 1935, he was a newspaperman in Boston for 52 years. He was city editor of the Boston Daily Record and Sunday Advertiser. He was later the editorial page editor of the Herald American, and for many years appeared weekly on a tv program entitled Starring the Editors.

Mr. Brooks served on the board of selectmen of Wilmington for 10 years, on the Wilmington Finance Committee, and for the past 18 years on the Wilmington School Committee. He was a member of the school building committee for several years.

Active in church affairs, he was a president of the St. Thomas Church Council, and served as lector in St. Thomas for many years.

He was in the board of directors of the Combined Visiting Nurses Association and held membership for many years in the Baseball Writers Association. He was a member of the Rotary Club of Wilmington, and the Fidelis Club of Boston he was a former chairman of the Somerville Community Fund, and the Somerville Knights of Columbus.

Mr. Brooks is survived by his brother Joseph L. Brooks, two sisters, Margaret M. Brooks and Mrs. Helen Doherty, all of Wilmington. Also surviving is a nephew Joseph G. Brooks of San Francisco, California; a niece Juli Ann Brooks and a sister-in-law, Dorothy A. Brooks, both of Wilmington.

Funeral services will be held from the W.S. Cavanaugh & Son Funeral Home, 374 Main St., Wilmington on Thursday morning at 10:15, to be followed by a funeral mass at St. Thomas Church at 11. Interment will follow in Wildwood Cemetery, Wilmington.

Visiting hours at the funeral home will be Wednesday from two to four and from seven to nine p.m.

Board seeks meeting with financial officers

Tewksbury selectmen voted Tuesday to seek a meeting with the town's finance committee and other financial officers in an effort to find out if the town will have enough revenue to fully fund the fiscal 1986 budget passed at the Annual Town Meeting.

In passing the fiscal 1986 budget, voters went above the amount the finance committee estimated would be available to fund town services. However, the exact amount of any coverage will not be known until the entire set of revenue figures have been received by the town.

Selectman Paul Sullivan suggested the board meet with the finance committee and the other financial officers to see "what they believe the situation is."

Sullivan said the books on the fiscal 1985 year have closed and should give the financial officers a better handle on what will be available to roll into the fiscal 1986 year.

Selectman Chairman Tom Girard agreed to call the meeting but warned the full set of figures for the upcoming fiscal year have not been fully compiled. "I think we will be made aware of the fact that they have not completed their calculations," Girard said.

Girard said the meeting will be set up as soon as possible.

The Coat Petition

Wilmington men who supposedly fought at Bunker Hill submitted a petition to the Massachusetts Legislature, asking for the coat money they had been promised. Many men were apparently unable to write their names in their petition for payment of coat money, signed on December 28, 1775. In the left hand column, names starting with Paul Upton through Thomas Hutson, and possibly others, seem to be in the same handwriting. And it can be noted, this includes the name of John Going (Gowing), who half a dozen years later was the captain of the Wilmington Militia. The name "Harnden" is written twice, apparently by filing clerks in the American army, or by officials of the Massachusetts legislature. The signature of Capt. John Harnden appears at the bottom of the right hand row.

Special needs camp a 'labor of love'

by Arlene Surprenant
"It's a labor of love." That's the reason Director Bob Scanlon and his dedicated staff and volunteers give for all the time they spend with their special needs charges at Camp Forty Acres in Wilmington.

Seven weeks each summer, from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. three days a week, you'll find Bob, Assistant Directors Bill Simmons and Dale Stirling, and some hard working teenage volunteers and staff helping kid shave "a summer of fun and activities where they can succeed and be happy."

These special needs young people, ranging in age from toddlers to 20-year-olds, are what it's all about.

They are the reason Bob, Bill and Dale keep coming back each summer since the program's inception in the summer of '71. They are the reason why staff members Mary Kelley, Joe Deegan, Betsy Peabody, Cheryl Fahey, Tammy Wesinger, Christine Piretti, and volunteer physical therapist Martha Carr work their summers around this unique Wilmington program. They are the reason why 20 teenagers, including five of Bob's own children, have given up their free time to help others this summer.

On this particular Thursday, as usually happens each Thursday, the whole camp is enjoying some fun in the sun at the McCowan's pool on Nathan Road. The McCowans have two special needs children who have since "graduated" from the camp and they have generously donated the use of their pool to the campers each summer.

Bob, Bill, Dale and I settle comfortably in chairs on the backyard deck and talk about the background of the special needs camp and especially its activities and the people who make the whole program work.

The camp was first located in the Swain School and remained there for three years. With some special effort on the part of Evelyn and Walter Kaminski, the program moved into the "beautiful wooded setting" of Camp Forty Acres, located between Ballardvale and Andover Streets.

Camp Forty Acres, explains Bob, was left in trust for use by the children of Wilmington. It is the site of many scout functions and overnights year round and Bob feels fortunate that they have been granted free use of the campgrounds during the summer months.

The special needs camp is sponsored by the Wilmington Recreation Department, which also holds a special needs Easter and Christmas party during the year to help the campers and staff stay in touch.

Thirty-three campers presently take advantage of the wide range of activities. Periods of time are set aside for active games, arts and crafts, special adventure, quiet games, lunch, and a camp meeting. Fridays are usually reserved for field trips to a movie, bowling alley, Hampton Beach, or theatre.

One special program, conceived by Bob and run by Bill, is Superstars, set up along the lines of the Special Olympics. However, Bob is quick to point out, they don't emphasize the competition as much as the fun, as in Superstars "there are no losers."

Morning events include a softball roll, 300 yard walk-run, and a 30 yard dash. After a lunch and thirst-quenching drinks provided by the Wilmington - Tewksbury Elks, the afternoon events, including a horseshoe toss, hockey shot, and zig-zag run, begin. And, adds Bob proudly, since the same teams compete each year and the staff has had 10 years experience with Superstars, the whole thing "goes off like clockwork," something which belies all the work and preparation Bill puts into the day long event. At the end, all competitors are awarded trophies and certificates paid for by the Elks.

Any Wilmington child with a disability may participate in the special needs summer program. All kinds of disabilities from hyperactivity to those severely handicapped are reflected here, says Bob, adding that all of them are youngsters who would find it hard to function in a regular playground setting.

For a $15 donation, parents can be assured their children will be carefully looked after in a comfortable setting which will "help them develop socially, physically, and emotionally," says Bob. He emphasizes that any one way he can tell the program has been a success is by the enjoyment on the faces of both campers and staff.

Bob, Bill and Dale are all school teachers who bring a lot of energy and talent into their summer job. Bob considers himself the "overseer" of the whole program, while Bill is in charge of pulling together special events and field trips and Dale handles all paperwork, including applications and health records.

"Everyone who works here takes their job as a great responsibility," explains Bob with a smile. But, he adds, "the success of this program really depends on the person in the field."

The person in the field is usually one of many teen volunteers who go through a special orientation program to help them work with and supervise campers on a one-to-one basis, where possible. Anyone can volunteer, though Bob especially seeks out teens in the seventh and eighth grades who might be encouraged to come back year after year. And volunteering, contends Bob, gives something back to the giver, including a sense of responsibility and a closeness with the children.

"If they come to stay for a week, they'd love it," enthuses Bob.

This year, however, they have had some trouble getting their volunteers. Bill attributes this to decreasing school enrollment (there are just not that many teens to draw from), other activities claiming a teenagers' time today, and the fact that it may be hard to reach Camp Forty Acres. The volunteers they do have, all agree, seem to be enthusiastic and do a "good job."

Dale, herself, started out as a volunteer and came to stay. Possibly because of her positive experience with these "affectionate," giving children, she went on to become a certified special needs teacher.

Heather Keiley and Maura Tully, 14 and 13 years respectively, are new volunteers this year. Both girls shyly talk of signing up in the rec office in Town Hall to see if they'd like the program. They enjoy helping others, especially children, and may even decide to sign up again next year.

Kathy and Karen Scanlon both started volunteer work many years ago when they first commuted with their father from Haverhill. Kathy have contributed to the camp's success.

The Wilmington Sons of Italy, says Bob, sponsors two cookouts, lends them the use of their hall, and helps run an Award-Breakup Night at the close of camp. For that dinner, the Rotary Club donates awards for each camper in such categories as Most Improved Camper.

The Kiwanis Club sponsors a day long cookout at the McCowan's pool while the Wilmington maintenance department funds the last overnight of the year. Highlighting that much anticipated event is usually a pony ride or the appearance of a clown and, according to Bob, these men do "a fantastic job."

Yes, says Bob, helping out in the camp is a labor of love, so much so that even though it may be time to move on to other endeavors, he and others find "it's hard to leave." For which one can only be grateful, as another year draws to a close.

Tewksbury eyes local motel/hotel room tax

Tewksbury Selectman Chairman Tom Girard has proposed his board research what will be needed to implement a provision of a local option tax plan created to help Boston ease out of its financial doldrums.

Girard has proposed his board meet with State Senator Patricia McGovern and State Rep. Jim Miceli to find out if the town can implement a piece of the Boston bailout bill by imposing a motel/hotel tax in town.

The bill allows local communities the option to impose a four percent levy on motel/hotel room rates, but Girard said the board would need guidance and information on whether Tewksbury could reap the financial benefits of such a tax.

Girard said any funds generated from the local option tax would go directly into town coffers, helping to ease the strain of other financial limitations.

Girard also said, in response to a question from Selectman Paul Sullivan, that "there are stipulations placed within the legislation itself" as to when the town could start imposing that tax. He said he would gather some information and bring it back to the board next week.

Two establishments in town would be affected by a local option tax on motel/hotel rooms, the Holiday Inn and the Caswell Motel.

Boy Scouts off to National Jamboree

Thirty-eight Scouts and four leaders of a specially formed Boy Scout Troop, for the Greater Lowell Council of Boy Scouts left the Council headquarters in Chelmsford Sunday evening to attend the National Jamboree, to be held for the next two weeks in Fort A.P. Hill, in Virginia. The troop number for the period of the Jamboree is 352.

Thomas MacFeeley, Scoutmaster of the American Legion Troop 136 Boy Scouts in Wilmington is the Scoutmaster of Troop 352. The Assistant scoutmaster is Bob Rachdorf, Scoutmaster of the Congregational Church Troop 56 of Wilmington.

Fort A.P. Hill, named for a Confederate leader in the Civil War, is near Fredericksburg, Virginia. Close to 35,000 Scouts and leaders are expected to participate in the Jamboree. Activities will include many subjects from amateur radio and archery, through handicap awareness, motor and bicycle trails, rubber rafting and shotgun and trap shooting.

Boy Scouts will be working on merit badge courses and competence courses. There will be patch swapping and meeting of new friends from all over the United States.

The Scouts and leaders are expected to return on August third.

It has been estimated that 100 hens would have to work for four and a half years to lay all the eggs that will be eaten at the breakfasts at Fort A.P. Hill, during the Jamboree. Seven and a half tons of sirloin steak, six tons of bacon, one and a half tons of salami and a ton and a half of baloney are expected to be consumed by the Scouts, plus such items as five tons of raisins and 400 gallons of mustard.

Scouts depart

Six firms bid to design town building repairs

Six architectural firms submitted bids for a contract to design construction plans for the repair of four municipal buildings in Tewksbury. Selectmen opened those bids Tuesday and voted to take them under advisement for a week before making their selection.

The board will apparently decide next Tuesday which of the firms will receive the contract to design and oversee construction of improvements to four of the town's buildings, the town hall, the center fire station, the library and the Center School.

The town meeting has given approval to spend up to $265,000 to repair the buildings. The stated priority of the project when it received an initial $200,000 allocation from an April 1984 town meeting was to repair the entire roofs of the library and center fire station and sections of the town hall roof. Also included in that initial package was proposed repairs to the Center School portico, the columns and the supporting structure, and repairs to the exterior of the town hall.

A recent town meeting added an additional $65,000 to the project when an architectural study showed the total scope of work could not be completed for the previously approved amount. That additional $65,000 will allow the town to finish repairs to the exterior of the town hall, but selectman and project advocate Brian Sheehan says the project funding does not allow the board to address any of the structural problems on the inside of the town hall.

Sheehan, who originally proposed the project, will review the bid documents with Town Counsel Charles Zaroulis.

The contract calls for the selected architect to design the work plans, prepare construction bids before August 7 and supervise the actual work. The town, in its request for bids, set a limit on the architectural fees of no more than $17,500, leaving some $247,500 to do the actual construction work. The timetable of the project calls for the work to start on or before September 1 and be completed within about three months.

The first part of the project would be replacement of the roofs at library and fire station. Those roofs have leaked after only 20-years of service and should be repaired before major damage to the inside of the buildings occurs, says Sheehan and an architectural study done by Arch Works of New Hampshire.

Arch Works, who was among the bidders for design of the 90overall project, was earlier retained by the town to do an architectural study that was presented to the State Emergency Finance Board. That state board is a watchdog agency set up to assure that the nature of town emergency building repair programs could not be funded through normal fiscal channels and that the work is actually needed.

None of the $265,000 could be spent before the state emergency finance board gave their nod of approval. That approval was gained earlier this year.

The library suffered damage to light fixtures and ceiling tiles when the roof sprung a leak some time ago. Likewise, the center fire station has suffered wall damage from a leaky roof.

Janet Beninati graduates

Janet Beninati, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dominic Beninati of Oakridge Circle, Wilmington was graduated from Dana Hall School in June.

At school she was a member of the Advanced Jazz Workshop and Senate Representative in her junior and senior years. All aboard for Buzzard's Gulch

by Arlene Surprenant
Wanna go to Buzzard's Gulch, partner? Though they knew nothing about it, that's exactly where 25 Casalot real estate agents and their guests went last Thursday night.

Promptly at 6 p.m., five limousines from Limo Inc. in Burlington pulled up in front of the Wilmington agency to pick up the agents - all winners in a recent competition to boost company sales - to take them on a mystery ride to the Boston dinner theater.

The whole idea was conceived, arranged, and paid for by new Casalot owner Donna Wayman. Wayman, who admits to having an "off the wall personality" and a penchant for fun, took over the business in May after serving as manager there for 10 years under former manager Peter DeGennaro.

To encourage more sales from her staff from June 1 to July 17, Wayman came up with the idea of surprising the winners of a contest with a mystery ride to an unknown destination. What she didn't anticipate was that everyone would qualify for a prize. Top prize winners were Peggy Smith and Patti Tabor who will get something extra in addition to the night out.

The fun started the moment they saw the limousines.

At first, said agent Ann Petrillo, "we were absolutely floored when we saw the limos." Then, she continued, they were treated to champagne, cowboy hats, bandanas, and plastic pistols as the chauffeurs took a roundabout route to Boston, keeping all 25 occupants guessing as to their final destination. Special guests included the DeGennaros who were invited by Wayman to join in the fun.

The saloon, jail, sheriff, and an complete "wild west" atmosphere at Buzzard's Gulch was just the fun type of setting Wayman hoped it would be.

Top prize winner Peggy Smith described the menu: Buzzard balls (browned potatoes), chicken in the basket, chili, salad, ice cream in a package, and beer and wine. In between courses, the audience was treated to a song and dance type show centering on the outlaw Black Bard, who turned out to be none other than Brian Joyce, husband of Casalot agent Jane Boyce.

Was all the effort worth it? As Petrillo said with a quick laugh, "we had a ball." And the staff is already looking ahead to Wayman's next original idea, with maybe just a touch of trepidation.

Tewksbury Senior League

Stars win District title

The Tewksbury National League Senior Division All Stars won the district title Friday evening at the Hadley Field in Lowell by defeating the Billerica American All Stars, 3-0.

The team swept all four of its district tournament games to win the title and advance to the Bi-District Tournament.

Tewksbury National began its victory march on July 10 with its first victory over the Lawrence South All Stars. The winning pitcher in this game was starter Doug Boudreau.

The team then moved to the Locke Field in Billerica on July 13 and played its toughest game in the tournament. Chris Comeau was the starting pitcher and went the distance, 10 innings to get the win over the aggressive Billerica National All Star team. The final score was 4-3, with the Tewksbury team fighting an uphill battle all the way. This game featured excellent pitching by Comeau, with clutch hits coming in the bottom of the 10th inning by catcher Joe Kearns, center fielder Brian Freitag and right fielder Bobby Long.

The next opponent for Tewksbury was the equally tough Billerica American All Stars. This game was played at the Hadley Field in Lowell on July 14 and featured a 13 hit attack by Tewksbury led by catcher Joe Kearns, who went three for four and knocked in three runs.

First baseman Scott Niles, who hit a solo homerun the day before, also had a fine day with the bat, going two for four. Doug Boudreau notched his second win of the tournament in going the distance.

The Tewksbury team then had to wait for the outcome of the Billerica American and Lowell Highlands game which ended in a tie on July 16 and was to be completed on July 19 before the start of the championship game at Hadley Field. The Billerica American eventually won the tied game, setting up a rematch between themselves and the Tewksbury Nationals for the title.

Chris Comeau pitched his second masterpiece of the tournament with a 3-0 three hit victory to win the district title. Head coach Bob Freitag credits the fine pitching performances of both Comeau and Boudreau and the excellent job of catcher Joe Kearns in taking control of the pitchers and calling his own game.

Other defensive standouts for the Tewksbury squad were Steve Gendron at thirdbase and Bobby Long in rightfield, Jay Rideout at secondbase and Ron Dawicki at shortstop. Pinch hitters Tim Beaton and Scott O'Brien also contributed with some timely hits.

The tournament continued on Monday at Odens Field in Tewksbury with the Tewksbury National All Stars meeting the Swampscott All Stars.

Tewksbury thirdbaseman Steve Gendron and catcher Joe Kearns run down Swampscott baserunner Mark Delisio in Monday night's game.

Wilmington Senior League Wilmington squads eliminated

This was a week to remember for Wilmington's tournament teams.

The senior boys (15 years old) were eliminated from play with a 16-0 defeat by Assabet Valley, and the Senior Boys (13 years old) were eliminated via a 21-0 defeat from East Boston.

Woburn was not kind to the softball all-stars. The Major League Softball stars lost a heart-breaker, 2-1 in eight innings to Woburn. The Senior League All Stars lost to Woburn, 13-11, as they were unable to hold off a Woburn rally.

The Major League All Stars did not fare much better, as this group of overachievers advanced to the final four double elimination section of the District 13 Tournament.

Arlington National 5 Wilmington 3

The first game away from home jitters was plainly evident, as the normally strong defensive teams from Wilmington did not give Andy Parr the support he needed to stop the Arlington Nationals. Fielding and throwing errors came at the wrong time, and Arlington capitalized each and every time.

On the plus side for Wilmington, Mike Morris blasted a homerun and single; Mike George had two singles and Andy Parr had a double in addition to another well pitched game. Dennis Walsh, Matt Calahan

Playground news

The Wilmington Recreation Summer Funland had a great third week of playground activity. The week started with a trip to Mr. Spumoni's. Eighty-five youngsters rode their bikes or walked to enjoy ice cream and candy.

League Champs

The Orioles baseball squad pictured above, were recently crowned 1985 Wilmington Senior League champions as they compiled an impressive 16-5 overall season record enroute to the crown. The Orioles topped the A's with an 8-4 victory in the third game of a best two out of three playoff series to capture the championship. Front row, kneeling, l-r: Erik Palm, Jeff Murphy, Chris McMillan, Mike O'Brien, Mike Dunn, Brian Kane, Chuck McEwen and Mark Ouellette. Second row, standing, l-r: Manager, Ken Cripps, Asst. Coach, Ken Cripps Jr., Brian Gibson, Scott McMillan, Dave King, Dave Schmitt, Dana Suprenant, Mike Scalfani, Jim Pelletier and coach Bob Reid.

and Kevin Gibson also contributed basehits.

Defensively, Greg Catanzano, Eric Engdahl and George Melitise turned in some fancy glove work.

Woburn Nationals 15 Wilmington 12

After spotting Woburn a 9-0 lead, the battling ball players from Wilmington staged one rally after another, but could not get closer than three runs. As in the previous game, on the road jitters took hold of the team during the first few innings before they settled down to play the type of ball they are capable of.

Mike George had a rough time on the mound, but at bat he singled and powered a three run homer to centerfield.

Kevin Gibson, Matt Callahan, Andy Parr and Marc Mercuri had two hits each, while Dennis Walsh and Mike Morris contributed one. Matt Callahan pitched well in relief, while defensive and moral support was supplied by Kevin Meeker, Jim Russo, Bobby Fleming, Derek Stokes, and George Melitise.

This group of all-stars earned the respect of their opponents throughout the tournament not only for their skills, but (and most importantly) their sportsmanship. Win or lose, these boys acted with class and were a credit to their parents and the town of Wilmington.

Air Reserve honor for Wakefield man and unit

Wakefield insuranceman Joe Curley has a second career with the US Air Force Reserve that has won him and his unit a national honor as the "Air Force Reserve's Most Outstanding Strategic-Domestic Aeromedical Evacuation Unit for 1984."

Curley is a lieutenant colonel in the Air Reserve and is the commander on the unit that won the award. His brother, Jim, is also a member of the unit. Joe is a resident of Wakefield and Jim now resides in Reading. The unit is the 72nd Aeromedical

Evacuation Squadron and the Curleys, along with other members of the unit, spend one weekend a month plus two weeks in the summer training, and, if necessary, taking part in aeromedical evacuations. The unit normally operates from a C-41 plane that won national attention during the removal of the 39 hostages from Beirut, Lebanon. The C-41 is easily converted to function as an airborne hospital for the emergency treatment of patients.

Curley joined the Air Force Reserves in the early 1960s as an enlisted man and found the challenge to be such that he spent the necessary time and effort to advance himself to the rank of second lieutenant. He continued to progress to the point that he now has over 20 years service and has achieved lieutenant colonel status.

Most local persons will know Curley as the affable insurance man who owns the Curley Insurance Agency with offices in Wakefield and Stoneham. Joe handles the Wakefield office while Jim is in charge at the office in Stoneham. Both are well-known and respected in the insurance industry.

In winning the award, Lt. Col. Curley said, "We're tickled to death about it and the timing was just right. It came right in the middle of our management inspection by the Inspector General. You can't imagine what the esprit de corps was like in our squadron."

This is not the first time the unit has won the award, but it has been several years since they were considered the best in the Air Force Reserve. Several years ago, the unit won the award five consecutive times. Lt. Col. Curley has been a member of the unit for 11 years.

As part of the 72nd, the Curley brothers find themselves flying everywhere in the continental US as well as overseas assignments evacuating military personnel. Probably the best known

The final week in Europe

Editor's note: This is the final in a series of stories from a recent trip to Europe. For the final week, the Stoneham writer went from Spain, with three others, to northern Italy, before returning to Madrid for the flight back home.

By JIM ROUILLARD

In Barcelona you may have to remove your belt.

An Italian in Madrid cautioned: "Beware the 'bad boys' in Milan."

But Venice, though sinking, and teeming with tourists, is charming, with legions of friendly, thin cats, a few scared-looking, muzzled dogs, and bedrooms as cold as the bomb.

En route to northern Italy from Spain, the writer, allergic to smoke, carefully booked a seat in the non-smoking signs and settled comfortably in an aisle seat, trusting to the prospect of pollution-free air during the two-hour flight.

Shortly after take-off, the man in the aisle seat opposite, bare inches away, lighted what smelled like a Spanish cigarette. I gestured to him, and pointed to the non-smoking symbol above my window. He smiled and pointed to his: smoking permitted.

An efficiency expert had divided the plane into smoking and non-smoking sections: straight down the middle of the jet.

As drivers 'we're the worst'

I've come to the conclusion that drivers in Massachusetts must be the worst drivers in the country. Furthermore, they've got to be the least courteous. This isn't just my opinion. I've listened to dozens of travelers who have stayed in our otherwise magnificent and historic state, and many of them feel that way also. Even many of our own Massachusetts residents believe they live among the worst drivers in the country.

One of those local folks who agrees with me lives in Woburn, which, as anybody who has had to drive through that city knows, has the dubious distinction of possessing some of the worst traffic congestion in the Boston area. He happens to live right off Main Street, on a dead end road that empties out into some pretty heavy traffic from a dangerous blind entrance. He related his experience with discourteous drivers:

"My biggest problem is getting in and out of my street. The driver behind me doesn't realize I'm trying to pull into a blind driveway, so he waits till the last second to brake and get off my tail. Sometimes they'll get so angry that they'll lean on the horn and then whip around me and accelerate away as if I'd done something wrong. If they were a little more courteous, they'd back off when they see me slowing down with my blinkers on."

He went on: "That's just the beginning of my headaches. Getting out of my tiny street is like trying to drive through the dodge 'em cars at an amusement park! To begin with, because it's a blind entrance, I have to creep out away until

I'm sure there's no traffic coming in either direction, then gun it to pull out. If there's a lot of traffic, and that's the case most

Wilmington police news

During the week ending July 23, Wilmington police officers responded to 10 accidents, 28 alarms, three domestic problems, one fire and 12 disturbances. Four arrests and nine protective custody detentions were made, other departments were assisted on three occasions, four larcenies were reported, one vehicle was reported stolen and two stolen vehicles were recovered.

Medical assistance was rendered, seven incidents of suspicious activity were investigated, one trespassing complaint and 11 complaints involving traffic were logged. One liquor related complaint was taken and five incidents of vandalism are still under investigation.

Arrests

Early Friday morning three people were arrested on drunk driving charges. Dennis Munroe of North Street, Stoneham was arrested by Sgt. Palmer and charged with driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol and failing to keep to the right.

Officer Jim Peterson arrested William LeCesse of Brentwood Road, Tewksbury. LeCesse was also charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol and failing to keep to the right.

The third person arrested and charged with operating under the influence was Robert Cullford of Merrit Street, Groveland. Cullford was picked up by Sgt. Palmer.

Another arrest Friday morning was made by Officer Jon Shepard who stopped Robert Carter of Florence Avenue, Tewksbury and charged him with operating without a driver's license and operating with defective equipment.

Friday evening William Herrick, Jr., 17 of Catherine Avenue, Wilmington was arrested by members of the A-Team and charged with possession of cocaine and marijuana.

Early Saturday morning Officer White arrested Michael Peterson, 19 of Brand Avenue, Wilmington on charges of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol and being a minor transporting alcohol.

Between Friday evening and early Saturday morning the Wilmington Police Department logged in over 100 arrests, 93 for trespassing and all others being alcohol related.

Officer Jon Shepard arrested Robert Yetman, 30, of Main Street, North Reading Saturday morning and charged him with operating a motor vehicle after suspension of his license.

Early Sunday morning David

Richards, 18, of Barbara Avenue was arrested by Officer Jon Shepard and charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol and possession of a class d drug (marijuana).

Also arrested Sunday morning was Barry Fredericks, 17, of Russell Street, Melrose. Fredericks was charged with receiving stolen property valued under $100. The arrest was made by Officer Neville.

Tuesday morning Officer Jon Shepard arrested Kirk Anderson, 37, of Shawsheen Avenue. Anderson was charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol and failing to keep to the right.

Ninety-three arrested

At approximately 11 p.m., Friday, July 19, officers Waterhouse and LaRivee were on routine patrol on Industrial Way when they came upon a large group of youths (100-120) in the parking lot of the Ferno Forge Corp. Noting that there was a large amount of alcohol present, and that the property was posted, the officers called for backup units. All Wilmington officers including the officers of the A Team which were on duty at the time, along with officers from the Reading, North Reading and Billerica departments, responded. As a result 93 youths were arrested for trespassing on private property.

These arrests followed a major enforcement effort on the part of the Wilmington Police Department to deal with the problems of public drinking, and, the possible resulting drunk driving.

Earlier in the evening, the selective enforcement unit (A Team) and the regularly assigned officers of the four to midnight shift brought in approximately 23 youths for similar offenses.

Torched ties

A dumpster full of old railroad ties was blown apart by an explosion on Saturday night in North Wilmington. Vandals poured inflammable liquid over the ties, and then torched it.

Wilmington senior topics

August social

The August therapeutic social has been closed out. All the places were allotted have been spoken for. Anyone who feels they cannot make the trip should call the center as soon as possible thus allowing someone on the waiting list to attend. The buses will leave the Center on August 15, the morning of the social at 10:30. Please be at the center by 10 a.m. to be checked off before boarding the buses.

St. Dorothy's picnic

Due to the small number of seniors attending St. Dorothy's annual senior citizen picnic, held every year in August, Fr. McAndrews has felt it would be better to cancel it out and make a donation to the Buzzell Senior Citizen Center renovation. Fr. McAndrew has been very considerate of all the needs of the town elderly citizens and realizes that we are working very hard to complete the Buzzell Senior Center as quickly as we can. He felt the donation would be more beneficial this year to all the seniors. For Father's prayers and donations we are very grateful.

Discount cards

Senior citizens identification discount cards are available at the Senior Center to residents of Wilmington 60 years or older any day Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Proof of residence and birthday are required when signing up. You must be a resident of the town to participate in any function financed through the Council on Aging budget. Wilmington is one of the many towns in the state which is increasing rapidly in elder population. We are very much aware of it as our participation in our programs is increasing. That is the reason we have to continually stress to our seniors, who have a relative visiting with them that we have programs which they cannot invite their guest to. We welcome all seniors to visit the Senior Center and enjoy a cup of coffee and conversation without seniors any time of the day Monday through Friday.

Wheel chairs needed

With so many seniors confined to their homes ill or disabled, we are being pressed for the loan of wheel chairs and other medical supplies. That leaves the center without a wheelchair. We try to keep a wheelchair in the center at all times

Almost everybody knows what an educated "brain" is. A clue would be a B.S., B.A., M.A., Ph.D., M.D., D.D.S. after a person's name denoting a degree earned and received from a college or university. But — not too many know what an educated "heart" is. It's when one knows something "good" about someone and says it and when one knows something "bad" and doesn't say it! Woodchips is dedicated to the proposition of telling every one of my readers something "good" about some person I know.

Like Chief Daniel Delaney of Danvas and Head of Security at Suffolk Downs. Dan served in Korea as a Marine fighter pilot with Ted Williams, the Splendid Splinter of the Boston Red Sox. A retired Massachusetts State Trooper he assumed the awesome responsibilities of Head of Security at Suffolk Downs where he is admired and respected for being strict but at all times fair. Dan's lovely secretary, Priscilla Ludwig of Saugus, is like Dan, a reader of this column.

Four nights in a row the number "4" kept coming up in a dream. I drew $400 out of the bank, went to the track, waited for the fourth race and played number "4". I don't know whether or not you believe in dreams, but this one came true — the number "4" horse came in — "fourth!"

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Chan of Stoneham represented Boston's Chinese community at a June 28 celebration honoring Reverend Walter Martin, S.J. on his 30th ordination anniversary. Father Martin is Boston's Seaport Chaplain.

I asked my Sunday School class years ago, "When Noah built a great big boat because a flood was coming, who was the captain of the boat?" Mark Aloisi raised his hand, then said "Joan of Ark."

Kathy tells everyone that the three rings of marriage for most women are the engagement ring — the wedding ring — and the suffering! People are inclined when in the wrong to lay the blame on someone else, like my little cousin Dennis Tully who was standing on the cat's tail. His mother Maureen, hearing the terrible commotion, shouted "Dennis, stop pulling the cat's tail!" "I'm not pulling the cat's tail, I'm standing on it. He's the one that's doing the pulling!"

Folks, we are generally judged by what we "finish," not what we start. I had to take my wife Kathy home from a party early last night — she could hardly keep her mouth open. Folks, you only know one side of the story, my wife tells her side at the afternoon teas and garden club meetings that in our marriage I couldn't have done any better and she couldn't have done any worse! Brother, you're getting old when you sit in a rocking chair and can't get it going — your knees buckle but your belt won't — your back goes out more often than you do — and when you sink your teeth in a steak and they stay there!

Few things are more beautiful than a single snowflake. Unfortunately they seldom come that way! It seems to me that almost everybody in Woburn knows Spike Boyle and there are that many and more who know this wonderful cheerful young man. I'm lucky too.

Those of you who are dog lovers know what I mean when I quote Dan Bennett. "There is nothing in the world that is friendlier than a 'wet dog.' Folks, the person who can't lead and won't follow makes a dandy 'roadblock.' My friend Ken Luppi and the lovely Diane McGurn are engaged. Kenny would like to hurry things a bit so asked Diane to run away with him and get married. Diane smiled and said, "No Kenny, I 'Canta-Luppi' with you today." They first started going around together when they met in the "revolving doors" at Jordan Marsh.

I asked the beautiful secretary Andrea Cefali of Winchester, "Andrea, do you file your nails?" "No," she said, "I just cut them off and throw them away!" When a man puts all his time and energy in getting things money can buy — he generally loses things that money "can't" buy — like integrity, honor and respect.

My son Tommy complains of headaches and I keep telling him, "Tommy, when you get out of bed in the morning, it's feet first!" Work is love made visible. My father made two barrels of wine a year. I hated crushing the grapes and pressing them. My father noticed my attitude and shouted,

"Get out! Get out! Your hatred for this work will distill a poison in the wine and make my work of love all in vain."

My marriage to Kathy has been a happy one because we strive not to think alike but to sit down and think together so we settle a problem to a successful conclusion, with no contusions. Every Thursday about noon I do my best to be at the Woburn Elks. The meals are fantastic and the friends I meet are superb. Like Leo the waiter, Queeno the cook, and Al Altavista. One gentleman I really miss is Bill McGarr, who reminds me of the great actor Ward Bond who played the part of John L. Sullivan in the movie "The Great John L." A hearty welcome to Father Michael Kearney, recently assigned to

St. Thomas Church in Wilmington. He is a native of Randolph and was last assigned to St. Rita's in Haverhill.

The Wilmington Fourth of July Committee presented a plaque to its favorite chef, Jim Hanley. The following members are commended for an outstanding job — Chairmen Jack Cushing and Frank Sferrazza, Dick Fudge, Bob Dicey, Jim Gillis, Joan Maga, Jim Stewart, John Brown, Dennis DeMaggio, Kathi Gillis, Paul Bova, Ken Spinelli and Joan Searfoss. A cousin of mine works in a fireworks factory. I asked him yesterday, "John, how's business?" "Woodchipper," he said, "business is 'booming!'" Sorry I asked.

Frank Mazzoni of Wilmington and Joe Foley from Tewksbury belong to a Minuteman Company but may be drummed out of the corps for showing up an hour late. My favorite mailmen are Harry McCloud, Tom Mooney and Charlie Mullen. They told me that since I've been feeding my dog linburger cheese and garlic bread, the dog's bark is worse than its bite. Scott and his brother Derek Binding of Winchester are taking up "sky diving." I'll stick to good old "terra firma," the more "firma" the less "terror." Officers Bob Giguere and Paul Pierce were dispatched to investigate a dead horse on Signorney Street. Making out a report Bob said to Paul, "Help me drag this horse to Ford Street. I can't spell Signorney Street."

A bucket of nuts a bushel of bolts, that's what my car is today.

Automatic choke, electronic valves, that all have their part to play.

With the P.C.V. and the E.G.R. pollution control devices.

Put in my modern car today, to try to give me ulcers.

How many of you remember the day the Model "T" was the rage?

That was the car I learned to drive, at a very early age.

It came in one color, nothing but black.

You'd hold the crank right or your arm, it would crack.

On cold winter morns, with that car of mine, I'd drive off to work, always on time.

They were wonderful days, I hope you'll agree.

Oh! I wish I still owned that ole Model "T".

CHARLESTOWN NAVY YARD

Boston National Historical Park has an exciting new exhibit of original paintings and drawings of life aboard a destroyer during World War II in the Pacific. The exhibit opened to the public on July 3 in the park's Visitor Information Center on Pier 1 in the Charlestown Navy Yard. Entitled "Sailor's Diary, Aboard the USS Lavallette, 1943-1945", the exhibit contains fifty-six drawings by George Eisenberg. "Sailor's Diary" is free and open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day until October 20, 1985.

The exhibit is particularly appropriate to the Charlestown Navy Yard, where hundreds of destroyers similar to the Lavallette were built or repaired during the war and later years. The USS Cassin Young, a sister ship to the Lavallette, is on permanent exhibit at the Navy Yard. Together the Cassin Young and the exhibit of Mr. Eisenberg's drawings evoke the spirit of life aboard a destroyer in a setting which was home for destroyers. Both the exhibit and the Cassin Young are free and open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

RADIO CLUB

Bruce Schwoegler, the meteorologist for WBZ-TV channel 4, will be the guest speaker at the August 7th meeting of the Billerica Amateur Radio Society. Schwoegler is scheduled to speak on weather patterns and how they effect radio waves.

The Billerica Amateur Radio Society (BARS) consists of over 140 members interested in the hobby of ham radio operation. BARS meets regularly on the first Wednesday of every month at the Honeywell facility on Concord Road in Billerica. Anyone who is interested in this or future meetings is welcome to attend.

SUMMER BEER GARDEN

The Summer Beer Garden, in the Oriental Garden of the Peabody Museum of Salem, takes place Friday, August 9, from 7 to 10 p.m. The event, in its fourth year, is Japanese in inspiration and celebrates more than a century of contact between the Peabody Museum and Japan. Jack Thayer, the Museum's Research Fellow in Japanese Arts and Crafts, is with his wife, Keiko, the prime mover and organizer of the evening.

"The summer beer garden, in Japan, has no great and ancient tradition behind it," Thayer reports. "On summer evenings people decorate rooftops or gardens with paper lanterns, sit around, eat snacks such as yaki-tori (broiled chicken) and drink beer." The Museum decorates the Oriental Garden and adjacent parking lot with Japanese paper lanterns, offers Japanese snack foods, and provides soft drinks and plum wine as well as the traditional Japanese beer.

The evening is decorative but deliberately simple. Thayer feels that's part of the appeal. "It's a chance to enjoy oneself on a summer evening," he says. "Many people wear Japanese summer clothing but we don't make a big thing about doing that."

The Beer Garden has grown, and Thayer suggests early arrival for people with an appetite. Keiko prepares the food in advance: 15 chickens, 30 pounds of rice, and 1,000 shrimp. "That's enough for about 800 people," Thayer explains. "We'll go on serving food until we run out, but once we start there is no more prepared."

There is no admission to the Beer Garden, but there will be a charge for food and drink. In the event of rain, the event will take place inside the museum.

TOM THUMB DAY

On Saturday, August 17, the museum has designated this day as "Tom Thumb Day" in honor of Middleboro's illustrious resident, General Tom Thumb (Charles S. Stratton), and the B&O Railroad's historic locomotive.

There will be a special display of rare Tom Thumb items as arranged by Mertie E. Romaine, author of the well-illustrated and famous book "General Tom Thumb and his Lady". She will also be present from 1 to 3 p.m. and will autograph every book sold during this 2-hour period. Ms. Romaine also wrote the narrations for the display.

In addition, there will be a very rare Tom Thumb O-gauge electric train set, made by The Hodge Mfg. Co., Inc., New York, in its original carton. The packing slip shows that this train set was made on October 10, 1932. The entire set is in excellent condition and a true collector's item. It is part of a huge collection of over 2,000 toy-trains that are on exhibit. 43 of these trains are operating, either push-button activated by visitors or computer controlled, including large overhead trains.

Anyone who can walk upright under the closed entrance gate (as Tom Thumb could have) will be admitted without charge. All others abide by the rules of $2.50 for adults, $2.00 for Seniors, and

$1.25 for children 5 to 12. Visiting hours are from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. Photography is permitted, including that of the Tom Thumb display. Group rates are available. The average visitor spends one hour viewing the 35 permanent exhibits in addition to watching trains running by.

The A&D Toy-Train Village is located at 49 Plymouth Street, North Middleboro, Mass., just 2 miles north of the Rotary off Route 18 and 28. For more information or a free color brochure, please call the Stationmaster at (617) 947-5303 anytime.

Irrigation information available

A new publication entitled "Trickle Irrigation" is now available from the Middlesex County Extension Service, according to Thurston Handley, Home Horticulture Specialist.

What do you have in common with a Dutch* exchange student?

You both speak the same language.

One of the most exciting things about opening your home to a European high school student from Educational Foundation for Foreign Study is sharing each other's world — in English. With EFFS there is no language barrier, because every one of our students speaks English in addition to his native language. And EFFS removes other barriers as well; all students are thoroughly screened, have full insurance coverage and their own spending money... and you don't have to have children to host a student. So there's nothing standing between you and this very special friendship.

Call us immediately and discover how you can host a European student.

Trickle irrigation, (sometimes called drip irrigation) is an effective method of watering vegetables and flowers. It applies water slowly and directly to the root zone through a plastic tube. This system saves from 30 to 70 percent of the water required by overhead sprinkler systems, since much of the water applied by sprinklers is never used by plants.

Most of the northeast receives an average yearly rainfall of 36-48 inches which, if distributed evenly, would be enough water to grow vegetables successfully. Unfortunately, rainfall is erratic and lengthy dry periods sometimes occur. During droughts, some towns restrict the use of water for gardening. Because the trickle method of watering uses only a fraction of the amount of water required by sprinkler irrigation, the limited water supplies that may be available for the garden can be used most efficiently.

Some of the advantages include: Economy of water use; Fewer weeds germinate; Less energy for pumping; Fewer Leaf diseases; Allows work in the garden while watering; Less fertilizer is needed; Savings of insecticides and fungicides.

Some disadvantages include: Trickle irrigation requires some time for initial installation; It is more expensive than most sprinkler systems; The tiny emission holes can become clogged with soil particles, and sometimes algae or mineral precipitates will block these holes; Insects and rodents may damage the trickle line emitters.

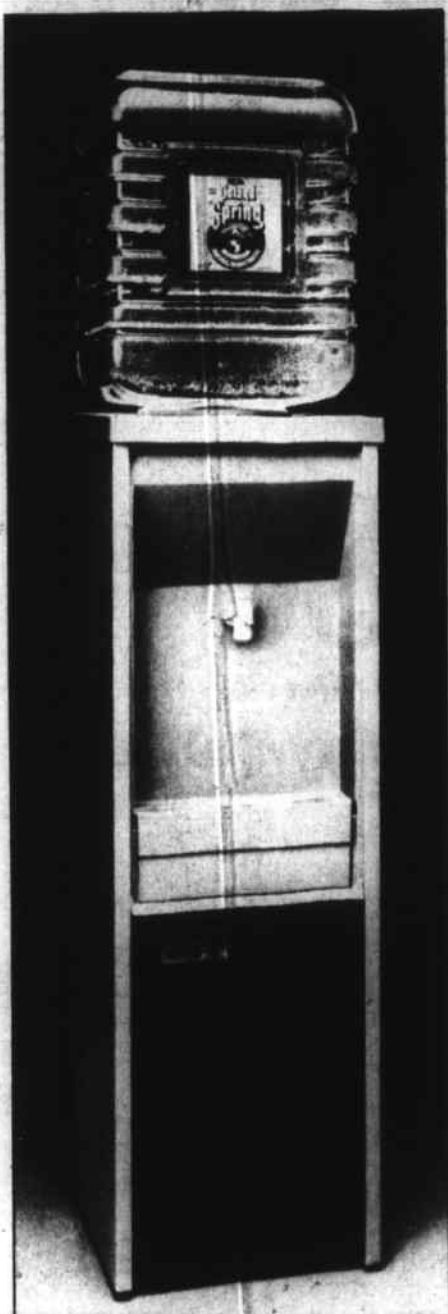

To receive this free publication on trickle irrigation, contact the Middlesex County Extension Service Agriculture Department, 105 Everett Street, Concord, Ma. 01742. Telephone: 369-4845 or 862-2380.

As drivers 'we're the worst'

of the time, I have to wait for the break in the flow, or hope I come across a courteous driver who'll stop and let me out.

"The other day I wasn't so lucky. I edged out onto the middle of the street, then got stuck there because nobody would slow down long enough to let me out all the way. Meanwhile, this woman driver sped around the bend, saw me and slammed on her brakes. I'd pulled out far enough for her to go around me, but she stopped anyway. She could obviously see that I was having a tough time of it, yet she insisted upon leaning on her horn and screaming some pretty nasty things at me. I'm amazed at how little class some drivers can have."

The classlessness certainly carries over into the cleanliness category too. The sides of our highways are among the filthiest this columnist has ever seen. Even with all the efforts lately to pick up the litter on the sides of our highways, they still continue to be littered as soon as the clean-up operation is over. I suspect that the people who find it convenient to throw their rubbish out their car windows are the same people who are responsible for most of the discourteousness.

I recently met this guy from the mid-west who had just been transferred to Boston by his company. He's settled in Burlington, and he says he's appalled by the number of discourteous drivers he's encountered in such a short time.

"I'm on the highway constantly," he said, "and I can't believe how many drivers around here don't use their directionals. They seem to think of switching lanes as a sport of some kind, because they sure as heck don't think of the other drivers' well-being. And heaven forbid that you should have to change lanes in a hurry! I had one lady flip me the bird the other morning, even though I'd used my directional. I couldn't believe it!"

This fellow from the mid-west said he found rotaries to be the hardest places to find a courteous driver. He noted: "I used to find myself being too cautious when I'd try to get onto, say, Rte. 93 from Rte. 128. I never got anywhere it seemed. Now I've learned to do what I see everybody else doing - I aim my car and just go and hope that the drivers around me are paying as much attention to me as I am to them. It's no wonder the car insurance rates are so high in this state! I see accidents everywhere I go."

Which seems to indicate how just a wee bit of courtesy might be worth a ton of prevention. There are exceptions to this rule, however. I've got three. First, you need a ton of good luck to drive through Boston, a city in which no amount of courteousness seems to help. The drivers in Boston are possibly the loudest I've ever encountered in my twenty years of driving. The state would do us all a big favor if cars were banned entirely from downtown Boston, and the only means of getting around the city would be by foot or public transportation. If you come from a nice, peaceful town in the suburbs, say a town like Weston, you need a post graduate degree in abnormal psychology just to deal with the drivers who live in Boston (those who don't live in Boston have had to learn to do as the Bostonians - and understandably so - just in order to survive).

My second exception are parking lots. Parking lots at shopping centers, movie theatres, hotels, even doctors' offices. It doesn't matter where they are. They all become hunting grounds that manifest the worst behavior in many drivers. Six cars will cruise one area (usually the closest to the door, because nobody likes to walk very far), just waiting for a space to become available. Then when one opens up, the fun begins. Tires will screech as all six cars accelerate toward that single space. Sometimes the competition becomes so fierce that the poor guy trying to get out of the space becomes stuck, and nobody goes anywhere! I tend to avoid busy parking lots the same way I'd avoid a deadly plague.

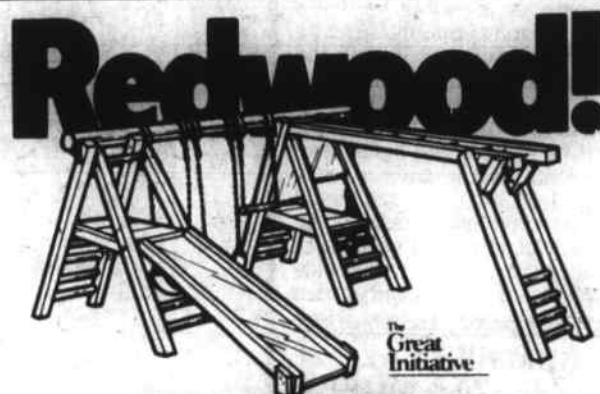

The third exception are sporting events. They also feature parking lots, but they deserve to be in a category unto themselves for a couple of reasons. Sports fans can be either very courteous or very discourteous. No in between. The ironical situation I've found here is this: if a home team loses, fans tend to be melancholy and lethargic, therefore, they tend to be more courteous when they are leaving the parking lot. If a home team wins, they often will turn into madmen when they exit the parking lot and all hell breaks loose. Then it's every driver for himself. If the fans have been in an exceptionally indulgent drinking mood, forget your chances of getting out of the parking lot without incident. You're better off waiting till the lot is empty before heading home (Patriots fans have the right idea - they make a day of it by cooking steaks and playing touch football before heading home).

The guy I met from the mid-west summed up the distorted views of some Massachusetts drivers this way: "Every time I turn around I see or hear ads for driving courteously in this state. They say a little courtesy won't kill you. Then the other day I encountered a driver who tried to cut me off Rte. 93 just before the highway merges with the expressway in Boston. I found myself slamming on my brakes and coming to a halt at the entrance to what I thought was an exit ramp. Only the ramp dropped off to nowhere! I thought to myself, only in Massachusetts will you find a ramp going nowhere just as you enter the largest city in the state."

That's a whole column unto itself, my friend. "Then toss in the fact that some of the roads around here are in the worst condition, with potholes and terrible lighting at night, that I've ever driven on in my life, and things can get pretty sticky."

Welcome to Massachusetts highways, fellow.

Mad Max

Explorers

Rochelle Flynn

Mad Max Beyond Thunderdome Starring Mel Gibson, Tina Turner, Helen Buday, Bruce Spence, Angelo Rossitto, Angry Anderson. Directed by George Miller and George Ogilvie. Produced by Miller. Written by Miller and Terry Hayes. Rated R (profanity, violence).

The post apocalyptic world of Mad Max Beyond Thunderdome is given a different twist from the barren, humorless world of The Road Warrior, the continuation of the original Mad Max film. In this third installment of the adventure series, Mel Gibson, as the hard bitten warrior, must face the inhabitants of Bartertown. Things are still pretty desolate, but an ironic, dry humor has crept into the campy film that was glaringly missing before.

Bartertown is a shantytown filled with huts and filth and a teeming population. The town's electricity is supplied by a subterranean slop house known, appropriately, as Underworld. Energy, you see, is now provided in a curious way (it would ruin the fun to tell you more) and this energy factory is run by the Master Blaster. He is actually two men who are psychologically bonded together, a brilliant dwarf (Angelo Rossitto) and his hulking, helmeted and simple counterpart (Paul Larson). You certainly have to give co-director George Miller and George Ogilvie credit for keeping our interest. This violent, active picture never lets our minds wander from boredom. From the outrageous characters to the lush jungle settings to the filth of Bartertown, this is an intense picture.

Thunderdome, by the way, is a large, convex cage into which "two men enter and one man leaves." It is the justice of the future and all battles are fought there by men who battle while suspended by contraptions that are very similar to large rubber bands. However, if you don't end up in Thunderdome, you could end up facing justice that is metered out at the roll of a roulette wheel. The entire film has these weird, but fascinating, concepts running through it. Tina Turner as Aunt Entity is Bartertown's leader, a strong woman who is the very essence of physicality. Turner, with her powerful, rhythmic voice enhances our interest in this character who, we discover, is a little more human than she would let us believe.

Speaking of humanity, Gibson is given a chance in this installment to regain some of his emotions that were tossed aside in The Road Warrior. When he encounters a band of children living in the desert and awaiting a savior to bring them to a world that has been long destroyed, you can see his heart breaking for them. Gibson also has a strength and authority that has allowed him to turn his character into a universal hero, making him that much more attractive to that part of us seeking supremacy over evil, no matter how sensational or outlandish the means.

The substance and action, including a car chase that involves crowds of people, odd cars, a locomotive and a plane, make Mad Max Beyond Thunderdome a definitive, enjoyable, summer flick.

Explorers Starring Ethan Hawke, River Phoenix, Jason Presson, Amanda Peterson, Dick Miller, Robert Picardo.

Directed by Joe Dante. Produced by Edward S. Feldman and David Bombyk. Written by Eric Luke. Rated PG (profanity).

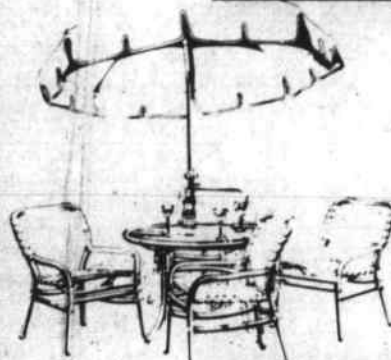

Science fiction flicks take a good ribbing in Explorers, a tale of three boys who build their own spaceship and encounter alien life.

The final week in Europe

From S-1

A 20-minute pause in Barcelona provided time for a quick gulp of "agua con gas" (bottled carbonated water) to settle my nausea, and another pass through metal scanners. For the first time my Indian-head belt buckle set off the alarm. "Remove your belt," said the officer, in Spanish, which I don't understand.

Finally, with his florid, impatient gestures, I understood — wondering if I'd have to take off my pants as well.

"It's funny how sheeplike we become when faced by officials," commented Chelmsford's Maureen Talayco, case manager for the elderly in the communities of Woburn and Winchester, and one of the quartet traveling to Italy after most of the Middlesex party had flown back to Boston.

By the time we arrived in Milan, it was twilight.

In Milan, with little or no Italian, you might as well try calling New Zealand as telephoning across the city. But we finally got through to our Milan connection: Andover's Dr. Pamela Kvilkval, on sabbatical in Milan to teach English to Italian executives. She instructed us in the intricacies of the Milanese tram system.

Rushing from the airport, we found the right tram, and tried to pay the conductor. "You cannot pay on the tram," Pam later explained, but must buy tickets in a tobacconist, a bar, or from machines which seldom or never work. Otherwise you face a 15,000 lira fine, if caught without tickets.

We weren't caught, and a second tram took us within a few blocks of Pam's apartment.

By now it was full dark — and we worried, a little, about the "bad boys" ("les garçons mauvais") which our Italian friend in Madrid had warned against, in French learned from his Belgian mother, as he displayed a sizable knife-scar on his hand.

We were: Talayco and her suitcase (heavy); her mother, Mary Bernard, also of Chelmsford, though born to Irish bog and brogue, also with heavy baggage; Andover's Peter Beaven, with suitcase on bitsy wheels drawn by a short strap through the streets, cobbles and curbs of Milan, and yours truly, with knapsack and shoulder bag — the only sensible way to travel.

We'd arrived the night before a holiday: the 40th celebration of the expulsion of fascism from Italy. The two women from Chelmsford and I blithely took the train to Lake Como that day. The lake, nestled among fine green hills — with a funicular railway to one of the highest — was crammed with people, the air around the water reeking of gas and diesel fumes from the endless autos circling the waters and the motor boats and launches offering lake-rides to tourists.

Luckily, we'd eaten, beforehand, a snack of marinated octopus, squid and seafood, in a Milanese cafe — so were not tempted to try to enter the packed restaurants of Como. En route back to Milan (the Italian trains run smooth, cheap and on time) on the outskirts of the city, we finally ran into a group of the "bad boys", we were told, had thrown a rock onto the trainbed — but no-one was injured and the train, undamaged, soon proceeded on its way.

On arrival back in Milan, we decided to use the facilities beneath the station: as I passed into the men's room, I noticed a cubicle with a woman in it, who could look into both the men's and the ladies' quarters. Above the mirror was scrawled: "200 lira." From within the confines of the gents' quarters, I soon heard a series of loud squawks, in Italian and Irish brogue.

Mary Bernard later explained she'd caused the uproar. "The attendant," she said, "handed me a little piece of thin toilet paper, not big enough for anything, and she apparently wanted money for it. So she started screaming: 'Prego! Prego!'"

"I wasn't going to give her anything for that little bitty piece of paper. She fussed and fussed about it, but Maureen had my purse and had gone, so I turned and said 'I haven't got it, and went my way, ignoring her screams.'"

Later, we went into the subway to buy tram tickets, and a group of teenagers started screaming "Prego!"

Mary blushed, and said, "Omigod! that same woman is still after me for the toilet paper money."

Along some of the streets of Milan, we passed huge, gumdrop-shaped hummocks of concrete, placed to prevent driving on the sidewalk. The next night in Milan, it was a choice of trying to get into "la Scala," the world-famous opera house, or accept an invitation to an Italian home for dinner. We opted for food over song, and got both. Our hosts, Ennio and Margherita Rubino, provided exquisite food, service, wine that they bottled themselves, dessert, cordials, and fascinating conversation in three languages.

During dinner, over the wine, we spontaneously broke into the drinking song from Verdi's "La Traviata," and though, after dinner, Pam and I both wanted to walk back to our respective places, Ennio insisted on first driving the others to their hotel, then retracing our route and picking us up on the way, sure that I would need my strength for walking the streets of Venice the next day.

Seasoned travelers often debate whether Venice smells. Author Patrick Dennis has his famous "Auntie Mame" remark that Venice is all right, if you don't mind the faint but ever-present smell of garbage in the canals.

Well, the canals of Venice do not smell — except in one minor instance, where I saw no water but only a green, oozy mud — but the streets are much too crowded.

It's easy to get lost in Venice, especially at night. And the city is so crowded that the time to see Venice is at dawn, when the Venetians are just beginning to go to work. Sunday's a time of great beauty, with the hundreds of church bells tolling the hour and beckoning to service — though the only others who went to the mass I attended were the very old.

Later that day, caught in a sudden black thunderstorm, I dashed into a cafe and debated whether to race back to my hotel and arrive sodden, or wait out the rain and have a glass of carbonated water. I decided on the water. The cafe owner led me to a booth half-occupied by a very long young man.

"Do you mind if this gentleman shares a booth with you," the proprietor asked.

"I don't mind," the six-foot-five American reckoned, in a drawl so slow I was prompted to ask where in the South he came from.

"I talk so slowly people think I'm a Southerner," said Bob Waggner, a young lawyer from San Francisco's California Street. We hit it off, and soon got talking with two young Germans in the next booth who had been tenting and hitch-hiking throughout Italy.

We all became such friends we spent nine hours in each other's company; Maureen Talayco and I treated the shivering Germans (it had rained on their tent the entire previous night — and our hotel was so cold in the Venetian fog that Maureen and her mother had to transfer hotels) to a dreadful and expensive pizza supper — and in return Brigitte and Michael led Bob and me well off the beaten canal, to a quiet pub they had earlier found, where no offensive tourists clamored and no officious waiters hovered.

When the bill for our drinks came, the Germans insisted on paying. "We invite you," said Brigitte, in her delightful, imperfect English, "So we pay for the drinks."

As we left the cafe Michael (19 years old) and I discussed German philosophers and Thomas Mann's novel "Death in Venice," he with a maturity I could not imagine in one so young.

Our German friends, so well-met in Venice, as well as young Austrians and Spaniards, and others we spoke with throughout Europe, had a surprisingly consistent attitude towards Americans: they see us as friendly, open, and progressive people, as individuals and as a nation. And they look to our technology and strength with a certainty that the combination will help to solve their and our own problems.

The last morning in Venice I rose at dawn, and found my way to a vast waterway, with huge steamers and other boats. The rainstorm of the previous day had cleared to brilliant sun, warmth, and a cloudless sky. As I sat on the paving-stones along this Canale della Giudecca, into which Venice's Grand Canal issues, I looked up and saw a three-masted schooner, which could have been out of Gloucester — or the spectral ship from Wagner's Flying Dutchman — and its ghostly beauty convinced me that Venice is well worth the crowds after all.

We returned to Milan that afternoon, on a perfect sunny day, with distant views of the Dolomite Mountains to the north, and passed alongside the lake resort, Lago di Garda, in sight of the Trentino Alps, then through Padua, where Shakespeare's Petruchio had "come to wife it wealthily," according to the lyrics of "Kiss Me Kate," and ended by taming the shrew.

One more night in Milan meant dining on vegetarian anti-pasta, green gnocchi (spinach pasta), "tira mi su," or pick-me-up, a light, ambrosial dessert similar to but better than trifle, and "semi-freda," an unbelievably light, exquisite ice cream.

Finally, it was New York that supplied the final touch from abroad. The taxi driver from Kennedy to LaGuardia Airport was a Rumanian emigre — with a boisterous, unabashed giggle identical to and as silly and endearing as that of Tom Hulz, the actor who played Mozart, in the film "Amadeus."

Tickets for Music at Eden's Edge are $6.00. The Castle's Roof Top Cafe will be open for pre-concert dinner. Please call 283-7673 for reservations.

From Castle Hill to California

Americans are turning to Amtrak's long-distance passenger trains in record numbers for their vacation travel. The reason - the growing popularity of seeing America at "see-level" from some of the world's most comfortable and modern trains.

Amtrak offers a 23,000-mile national system serving more than 500 locales from New England to Southern California and from the Pacific Northwest to southern Florida. A call to Amtrak or one of its 13,000 authorized travel agents can arrange your hotel stays, sightseeing or car rental reservations as well as train tickets. There are hundreds of Amtrak tours to America's top travel destinations.

Amtrak's All Aboard America fares are the travel bargain of the summer. $150 buys unlimited round-trip coach travel within any one of three regions in the country. $250 opens up two adjoining regions; and for $325 per adult, a family can cover the continent and back with stopovers in each direction. And children 2-11 travel half price, under 2 free. There are also other generous discount and excursion fares.

For further information, call Amtrak's toll-free information and reservations number, 1-800-USA-RAIL, or visit your nearest Amtrak - authorized travel agent. Amtrak and its travel agents also make reservations via Rail Canada.

Castle Hill, Ipswich

On July 26 and 27, the Great House at Castle Hill will be open to guided tours. The 59-room Stuart mansion is set atop the crest of Castle Hill, with a view of Crane Beach and 2000 acres of conservation land. The house will be open from 10 AM until 2 PM. Tickets are available at the door.

A Jazz Ball in the Italian Garden at Castle Hill on July 25, 26, and 27 will feature dancing under the stars in the candle lit Italian Garden to the sounds of the 1930s and 40s. There is reserved seating at cafe tables, reserved auditorium seating, and general lawn seating. Tickets are available from the the Castle Hill Box Office (356-4070) or at Bostix.

VA questions & answers

Q. - I just got married. Does my wife automatically become the beneficiary of my VA insurance policy?

A. - No. The most recent person designated as your beneficiary does not change. You must notify the VA that you wish to designate your wife as your beneficiary.

Q. - Are prisoners and parolees who are otherwise eligible, entitled to VA benefits?

A. - Veterans in prison or on parole may still be entitled to certain VA benefits.

Q. - I am having difficulty making my payments on a VA guaranteed home loan. What would happen if I stopped making the payments?

A. - Failure to make payments on the loan may lead to foreclosure and the loss of your home. In addition, if the government is required to pay a claim as the result of failure to repay the loan, you would become indebted to the government for the amount of any such claims.

Q. - Are rent supplements paid to certain low income bracket families considered income for VA pension purposes?

A. - Amounts received under this program will be excluded in considering income for VA pension benefits.

Q. - I am receiving benefits under the GI Bill; however, my delimiting date is rapidly approaching. I was unable to start school when I originally planned because of an industrial accident. Can my delimiting date be extended because of my disability?

A. - Provisions do exist for delimiting date extensions for veterans who are unable to pursue training because of physical or mental disabilities. Length of extension is based upon the facts of the individual case but may not extend beyond December 31, 1989. You should contact your nearest VA office for details.

Prevent fires at home

A smoke detector has never prevented a fire from starting. Unfortunately, many people think they need not worry about fire because they have smoke detectors. They still forget that even if they get out safely, which of course is the most important thing, they still could suffer tremendous loss.

Smoke detectors are not infallible. Detectors are often installed where they aren't easily heard. If not checked periodically, they become dirty or corroded and have worn out batteries.

Every household should have reliable smoke detectors and fire extinguishers as well. Everyone should realize, though, that these are only backup devices. The main line of defense is fire prevention.

Movie Review From S - 7

The dreamer in the group is played by Ethan Hawke, who has waited all his life for something truly fantastic to happen to him, and greets his destiny with optimism and wonderment. Hawke has a gentle, naive quality to him that is reminiscent of a time when we all believed in Santa Claus and creatures from Mars.

The brains of the group is a plodding, German, nerdy type played with stoical appeal by River Phoenix, but the real heart and soul of the group is portrayed by Jason Presson. Underneath his no-nonsense, cynical crust is a barely hidden, youthful delight for the adventure he has embarked upon with his two exploring buddies.

Director Joe Dante (Gremlins) takes some chances with Explorers, most of which pay off. From the moments the children begin to build their ship from a Tilt-O-Whirl and assorted bits of junk to their maiden voyage, the tension and good spirits keep mounting until you are gleefully anticipating the climax of the film. But when Dante hits pay dirt, things get out of hand. His version of the "secrets of the universe" is deliciously ironic, but the entire situation becomes little more than a stand-up comedy routine that is funny at first, segues into amusing and eventually grates up in one's nerves.

A silly climax, however, does not ruin the picture. Dante and his youthful cast keep most of the laughs intelligent and the atmosphere tense - not a bad combination for a summer flick that is aimed predominately at a youthful market.
